

Creates a treeview control with the given content. Optional tab stops are defined. If the tab stop is specified as zero, it will be ignored. Return Value Arguments content The tree content. tabStop The tab stop. tabStops Specifies the tab stops for the treeview. Returns the tabstop if it is successfully created, null otherwise. This method has the following requirements: If tabStops is null, the tabStop parameter has no effect. When specified, tabStops must be a 0 (zero)-based list of integers. The list of integers must not include negative values. This method has the following: Remarks This method uses the BeginResize and EndResize events to update the treeview's position. References The BeginResize and EndResize events are defined in the System.Windows.Forms.Control class. For more information, see BeginResize Method and Event. See Also BeginResize Method and Event Remarks It is not an error if the control is not in a valid state for the BeginResize or EndResize events to be raised. For example, if the treeview is in a closed state, the events are raised even if a resize was not initiated. This method is overridden in a derived class to indicate whether the control can be resized or not. In the overridden method, return a value indicating whether the control can be resized or not. The function of the grid parameter is as follows: If grid is System.Windows.Forms.Grid.Left, the control is left justified. If grid is System.Windows.Forms.Grid.Right, the control is right justified. If grid is System.Windows.Forms.Grid.Top, the control is top justified. If grid is System.Windows.Forms.Grid.Bottom, the control is bottom justified. If grid is System.Windows.Forms.Grid.Both, the control is left and bottom justified. Remarks The Grid parameter is used by the rectangle resizing algorithm.
